The Creative Travelers Handbook: The Art of World Travel: Life-Seeing Instead of Sight-Seeing.

Light is bent downwards when it hits a layer of cold air, making it appear as if what is below our sight line is actually straight ahead or above us because we are seeing the inverted image of what is on the horizon projected above it. Dickey brings together bits of history, folklore, and psychology to examine why people keep these tales alive long after their characters are dead, skeptic and believer alike.
